With the COVID-19 outbreak, we have all been forced to work from home and stay indoors a lot. This is very hard for people who like playing video games. They normally play at home, where they have a bigger monitor to play on. But for people who want to play on the go, using a laptop or portable monitor is not good enough. This will work with virtually any game you play, and the game will even detect it as such and allow you to play. The best wireless controller is the Logitech G920, which has the full specifications that most gamers want. The wireless range is good, the battery life is long, and the buttons are responsive. The only drawback is that it is quite large. It is very well made and the controller works great. You can use any wired Xbox 360 controller with your computer and play on the go, though it is not advised. If you want a Bluetooth controller, check out the Logitech Pro Gears. With its slim design and great battery life, it is the best choice in the market. The only downside is that it does not have the wireless range of the wired controller, but it does have the full set of buttons and two programmable buttons that are great for mapping. Logitech Gaming Headsets – If you are in a gaming situation where your wired controller is too large, or you simply want a high quality headset, then these are the best choice for you. The specifications are great, they are comfortable, and the sound quality is very good. There is a range of wired headsets, including the Astro A40 and the SteelSeries Siberia 300.
