

In this episode of The Soloist, I chat with Alex, a musician and songwriter from the Midwest who has been following the careers of many newer artists. Alex gives me some great insights on how to find bands that I might not have heard of, or even to discover songs I may be unfamiliar with. I also discuss how the advent of smart phones is changing our musical culture. In the final section of this podcast, Alex plays some of his music and sings a few songs about the struggles that he faces as a musician. He talks about how many musical genres that he plays in, and why he sings in three languages. Also, be sure to check out Alex's Bandcamp.
