

HyperMotion Technology improves AI, Player Intelligence, Player Physique and Athlete Behaviour, and introduces new Player Intelligence-driven in-game systems. The first game update introduces three highly improved FIFA Ultimate Team modes: Squad Battles, Draft Showdowns, and My Team. The Squad Battles mode provides an optional format for teams of two or more to compete against each other in exciting competitions. In Draft Showdowns, users compete in weekly virtual drafts - or draft-style matches - to select their team's squad from a list of players available at that time. Finally, My Team allows users to create a custom team of legends, current players and/or FUT Ultimate Team players from the player pool and then compete in matches, resulting in an improved structure of the Player Stats section. FIFA Ultimate Team has also seen a host of content and gameplay improvements. New players, such as Jay-Z, David Beckham and Wayne Rooney, can join the game with the latest update. In addition, new captain cards have been added and players can receive special "Phantom"-style cards in their inventory. FIFA Ultimate Team will continue to evolve with new player cards being developed, as well as new modes being added. EA Access members who have played the first five months of game modes will receive these modes for free. They can play new modes such as Squad Battles and Draft Showdowns, and FIFA Legends can challenge previous My Team setups in online matches. Members who have not yet played the EA Access mode will still receive the FIFA 20 beta and FIFA 20 My Team setup for free. The updated game also introduces the ability to win everything with a maxout in League Play. This allows players to choose their experience level (Professional, Elite, Pro) and test their skills against experienced players. If a player wins every match, he/she will reach a maxout of 999. This new feature allows players to test their skills in their league play settings, and also test strategies. This is a great way to see how a team would be put together in-game. "We're excited that so many of our fans are passionate about the game and enjoy an immersive experience with FIFA," said FIFA community manager Amr Awad. "We have listened to fan feedback and created new, fun experiences for the game that players will enjoy." As a launch title, EA Access members will receive beta
