“With Hypersonic Technology, we sought to improve not only the way football is played but also the way it’s viewed,” said David Rutter, senior producer at EA SPORTS. “We were overwhelmed at the generosity of the players and clubs who made this new technology possible. It was incredible to see how, like us, they dream about, discuss and debate the latest technologies in game development. In this case, our research with these athletes led to a very exciting new addition to FIFA.” Now, you can fully harness the movement of your players and recreate their full-body actions in live gameplay. The value of capturing motion capture data through the official clubs is clear with the detail and realism that the technology can provide. “This technology is the foundation for our Ultimate Team - where you assemble the best team possible and challenge the best players in the world using our new in-game matchmaker,” said Todd Sitrin, senior producer at EA SPORTS. “Our vision was to be able to capture not only the movements of the players in a match, but also their emotions, expressions and reaction to a tackle or pass. This has been one of our goals for a while and we’re excited to see what the community can create using this data.” Enhanced gameplay The new in-game Ultimate Team mode features a completely redesigned matchmaker and new rules that enable you to customize clubs with a wide variety of player attributes, including level, attributes, formation and kits. In Ultimate Team, matches last for a full 90 minutes with more leeway for substitutions than traditional gameplay. A maximum of 18 players can be on the pitch. You can earn exclusive rewards by completing milestones, such as defeating a big club or achieving victory in a cup final. Each FIFA 21 player has been enhanced with unique animations and dynamic reactions.

Players move and engage with better awareness and intelligence. There are new plays and passes made available by the system, making it easier to generate opportunities and score goals. Precision passing and even more dribbling from one-on-one situations are now possible. Better dribbling also allows players to control the direction they are moving and how they make their pass. A new left/right dribble slide enables players to land on the ball and then carry it into space with the motion of their feet. Other advancements make it easier for players to establish dribbling
