

5/24/2016 12:32:37 PM Using the Windows 10 Mobile version of the new Word Flow keyboard, I was able to take a screenshot of text from the app using the print screen button. It looks like a preview of the Windows 10 version of Microsoft Word, but instead of an integrated word processor, Word Flow is a note-taking app which has been redesigned to take on Apple's Notes app. The app is free, though doesn't come with any ads, and not unlike other Word Flow apps, it lets you create notes in the form of lists and images.

You can also create bulleted lists, but these could be produced by a number of apps. Word Flow is available for iOS and Android, while the Windows 10 version is currently rolling out to Insiders Powerful notes sync across all your devices. Fill out new notes online by typing or paste rich formatting into your notes No more endless lists of text. Know which notes are yours by sorting your notes by categories and tags Quickly find your notes in a searchable index of your entire collection New design with a built-in search bar. Learn more about Word Flow The Windows 10 version of the new Word Flow keyboard now supports text editing directly in the app while on the lock screen, which should make it easier to get to text. The print screen button now prompts for the UI permission with a nice explanation of how it will be used. What's New For Windows 10 5/22/2016 4:06:49 PM We added nine new themes to Windows 10 Mobile, including this gradient-themed dark theme. It's available on the Microsoft Store for free. Looking for something else? . Type Something Then Sync to Remember It Your notes can sync across devices as long as you're running Windows 10, either on a phone, tablet, laptop, or PC. When your phone and PC, for instance, see the same note, they'll automatically sync, so you can edit your note and continue editing on the desktop, or vice versa. Your notes will sync as long as you have internet connectivity on both devices. What You Can Do With Color Note Notepad For PC 5/20/2016 10:11:02 AM Snapchat's official app is back in the Windows Store on Windows 10, after being removed back in July.
