Player behaviors are enhanced through new physics engine features, an enhanced ball control engine, a restructured goalkeeper AI, and a new FIFA Ultimate Team mode. The game also introduces a new battle royale game mode, "World Class," and has a new feature for the FIFA World Cup™: "Team of the Week," which allows players to create real-life teams for FIFA matches. Other new features include the ability to share the new background audio created for the franchise. Players will be able to use the new motion capture data collected from the players to create true-to-life animations of players for individual players. Additionally, the players can be moved and controlled in the game as if they were in the real world. This allows players to make accurate and expressive gestures that mimic their own unique traits. No other football video game does this at this level. Both the PES and FIFA teams have been working on their latest games for many years and are well-equipped to handle the challenge of creating the FIFA: World Player Edition. New ideas can be tested by the talented gameplay teams during the development process and adjustments will be made during testing. EA SPORTS has enhanced all the new gameplay features in FIFA, including 10 new Ultimate Team cards with unique FIFA player content, and an all-new "Team of the Week." Additional teams will be added in the months ahead. These teams will be available in Madden Ultimate Team. "We're thrilled to be working with our amazing partners at PES Global on the FIFA: World Player Edition. There is no video game that does what we've achieved in the FIFA franchise, and the new features and the new team modes really push the envelope in many different ways for the fans," said David Rutter, vice president of Game Development at EA. "We are incredibly excited about our partnership with EA SPORTS as we continue to build the best football video game in the world. For the FIFA fans, 'World Player Edition' is the ultimate player fantasy game," said Michico Tanasi, founder and CEO of PES Global. "The new game features like 'FIFA Bonus GP,' 'FIFA Team of the Week,' and 10-card Ultimate Team mode will bring your FIFA experience to a new level." "FIFA was created by EA and is a true home for millions

FIFA (from English "Foot-Ball Federation Internationale") is an Electronic Arts video game series produced by EA Canada (originally EA Sports) for PlayStation, Nintendo GameCube, PlayStation 2, and Windows. For each game in the series, a new version has been released every year of the series, with the first game of the series being released in September 27th, 1993. The series has sold over 86 million copies since its first release. There are two main versions of the game: A more hardcore version for PC and on consoles and a simpler simulation version for consoles and Nintendo GameCube. There is also a special version for the PlayStation Portable, entitled FIFA Soccer 08. The simulation version is for arcade-like, school-based, and/or 4-vs-4 gameplay, with a play style that is a sort of hybrid between FIFA Street and the top domestic leagues from around the world, while the more complex version is for EA's sports management simulation as well as national and club team play. The series' license was purchased by Electronic Arts on September 29, allowing them to publish and develop games based on the FIFA brand. As of May 1, EA owns both the FIFA and NCAA Football franchises. The series is set in a fictional football world, where the main sport is called "Foot-Ball" or "Foot-Ball Federation Internationale" and features a regular season of 32 matches throughout the year, followed by a single-elimination tournament to determine the champion. The series has maintained the FIFA scoring system of previous games, which is set at a goal average of 0.5 to determine a winner (a perfect game = 100%, average = 50%, etc.). Many of the game's modes and modes have been carried over, although not all.
